Some works that I made a while ago, but never showed, stayed on my mind. Maybe you recognize this, you just make something, it goes easily and after the work is finished it feels logical, although you can't really say why. I find it an interesting phenomenon how works can bear ideas that you are not able to put into words while making them. I find myself coming back to those works, keeping them near, starting to live with them. For this show I've put the individual made works together, so they would create a context for each other. A context that grew in my head over time, and one I like to share with you by three short thoughts.
